If there is a dream that most people have in common it would have to be "how to succeed in life," and one person who's hard at work trying to make that dream come true for the masses at large is international speaker Andy Shaw.

His official spokesperson Peter Halm explains that Andy Shaw has revealed that one of the key secrets to success is that before you can have success, you have to be successful, and that just by following some of his simple advice, a life can be instantly changed. When asked to expand, he said that the word successful, like so many words, changes its meaning depending on where you use it, and this is one of those occasions. He went on to say that unsuccessful people believe that success just 'happens to you', as from the position where they are looking from it would appear to be the case. However, one of the key success factors is that prior to becoming successful, a person had to become successful.

Halm was quick to simplify and said "in other words people tend to tune into their success and when they did that then success flowed to them, thanks to their positive attitude. Success is all about people learning to go with the flow of life instead of opposing it. We all know it is far easier to free-wheel a bicycle downhill than it is to pedal up it. Success can be achieved the hard way, but that people must realise that it is simply a person following the hard path for themselves. He added that one secret of success is to find your natural path towards it, then find the way to free-wheel towards it and finally as if by magic, success will suddenly find you, meaning successful people will tune into their success and subsequently create it for themselves.

He then explained how Andy Shaw was able to help unsuccessful people by making them realize that it's not about just wanting what you haven't got or not wanting what you already have, but just a question of tuning into your success. In fact this is the opposite of success and you will never create it from that position. What you have to do is first become happy where you are and with what you've got. You need to stop focusing on what you haven't got and start appreciating what you do have. Peter quoted Andy who says "You have to practise the attitude of gratitude, you have to become grateful. The more you become grateful for what you have, the more of what you have you will get to become grateful for. The bottom line really is that successful people are grateful for what they are going to get from their success, but they are grateful, naturally without giving it thought."

Andy Shaw is quoted as saying to others about the tipping point of success "I'll assume that you would like to become successful and that you would like your journey to becoming successful to be a fun and rewarding one....And one which is all free-wheeling downhill. Now just because I say 'all free-wheeling', doesn't mean there won't be some big potholes in the road, but that you will get past them without too much trouble. Because you are going with the flow. The secret is to get your mind into a state of knowing that you will become successful in the area you choose to go into. Success for me lies in writing and business, and inspiring people to inspire themselves. But success for

Mother Teresa lay in looking after children in Calcutta."
